SECTION 1

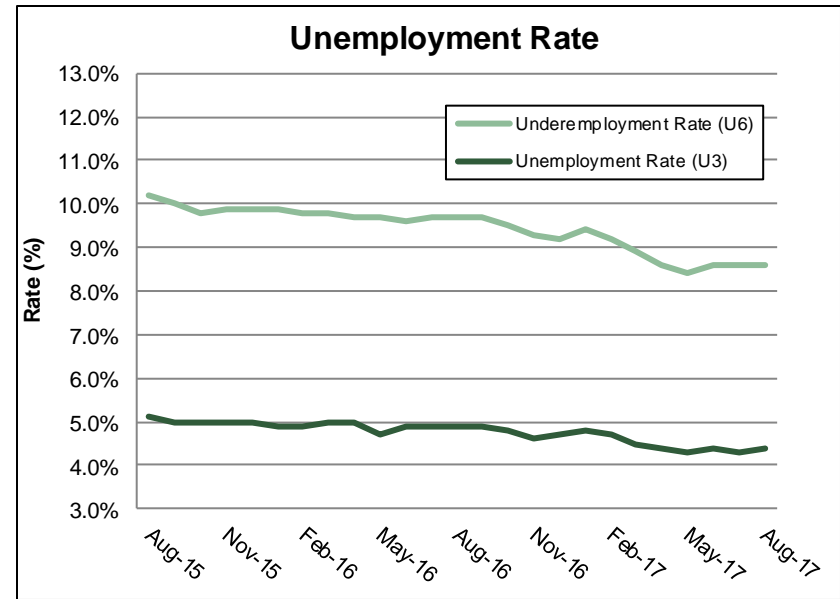

Economic Update

- The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) left the fed funds target rate unchanged at a range of 1.00%-1.25% at the July 26 meeting. The FOMC did not update their economic projections (which point to another rate hike before the end of the year) or host a press conference in conjunction with that meeting. The language of the Fed's policy statement suggested they could begin tapering the amount of their balance sheet reinvestments in September. The statement specifically said they plan to begin implementing their balance sheet normalization program "relatively soon". Though inflation is expected to remain below the Fed's target in the near-term, the FOMC expects inflation to stabilize over the medium term. We continue to believe the Fed is likely to keep policy rates unchanged through year-end, but believe policymakers are firmly committed to starting the balance sheet normalization process this fall. All else being equal, we believe the FOMC's plans to normalize the balance sheet could ultimately foster a steeper Treasury yield curve.
- GDP grew by 3.0% in the second quarter, following growth of 1.2% in the first quarter. We expect economic growth to remain modest through year-end. While tax reform or fiscal stimulus may ultimately help fuel stronger economic growth, there is a high level of skepticism among market participants that the Trump administration will deliver on their legislative agenda. In addition, concerns are building about the looming debt ceiling debate. Though financial market volatility has been quite low in recent months, we expect volatility to be elevated this fall.
- The Treasury yield curve flattened in August. The 2-year Treasury yield declined two basis points to 1.33% and the 10-year Treasury yield declined about 18 basis points to 2.12%. We believe geopolitical tensions and domestic political uncertainty weighed on the long end of the yield curve.

Nonfarm payrolls rose 156,000 in August, weaker than the 180,000 consensus estimate of economists. In addition, June and July payrolls were revised down by a total of 41,000. On a trailing 3-month and 6-month basis, payrolls increased by an average of 185,000 and 160,000 per month, respectively. The unemployment rate increased to 4.4% in August from 4.3% in July, and the labor participation rate held steady at 62.9%. A broader measure of unemployment called the U-6, which includes those who are marginally attached to the labor force and employed part time for economic reasons, was unchanged from the prior month at 8.6%. Wages increased 0.1% in August and 2.5% on a year-over-year basis.

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) was up 1.7% year-over-year in July, versus up 1.6% year-over-year in June. Core CPI (CPI less food and energy) was up just 1.7% year-over-year in July, unchanged from the prior month. The Personal Consumption Expenditures (PCE) index was up 1.4% year-over-year in July, unchanged from June. Core PCE (excluding food and energy) was up 1.4% year-over-year in July, versus up 1.5% year-over-year in June. Inflation remains below the Fed's 2.0% target.

On a year-over-year basis, total retail sales were up 4.2% in July compared with an upwardly revised 3.4% increase in June. On a month-over-month basis, retail sales increased 0.6% in July, above expectations for a 0.3% increase, following a 0.3% increase in June. Excluding autos and gas, retail sales were up 0.5% in July. Overall, July retail sales were better than expected. Meanwhile, the consumer confidence index remained strong in August at 122.9 versus 120.0 in July.

The Index of Leading Economic Indicators (LEI) rose 0.3% in July, following a strong 0.6% increase in June. The increase in the LEI suggests economic growth may improve through year-end. However, the Chicago Fed National Activity Index (CFNAI) decreased to -0.05 in July on a 3-month moving average basis from 0.09 in June. According to the Chicago Fed, the CFNAI points to economic growth near the historical trend. Overall, we believe the economy remains on a slow growth trajectory.

Total housing starts fell 4.8% in July, following a 7.4% increase in June. Single-family starts fell 0.5% in July, while multi-family starts plunged 15.3%. Permits were also weaker than expected in July, down 4.1%, driven by a significant decline in multi-family permits. Although the July housing starts report was disappointing, the weakness was driven by declines in the multi-family component which tends to be more volatile. According to the Case-Shiller 20-City home price index, home prices were up 5.7% year-over-year in June, unchanged from May.

The Institute for Supply Management (ISM) manufacturing index increased to 58.8 in August from 56.3 in July. A reading above 50.0 suggests the manufacturing sector is expanding. Meanwhile, capacity utilization, which is production divided by capacity, increased to 76.7% in July from 76.6% in June. The capacity utilization rate remains below the long-run average of 79.9% (1972-2016), suggesting there is still excess capacity in the industrial sector.

Second quarter GDP grew at an annualized pace of 3.0%, according to the second estimate, following growth of 1.2% in the first quarter. Second quarter GDP growth was revised up four tenths from the advance estimate of 2.6% and was higher than expected. The upward revision was led by consumer spending and business investment. The consensus forecast currently calls for GDP growth of about 2.5% in the third quarter.

The yield curve has flattened meaningfully this year. The spread between 2-year and 10-year Treasury yields was just 79 basis points as of August 31, compared to 126 at the end of 2016. In the three months ending in August, the 2-year Treasury yield increased about four basis points while the 10-year Treasury yield decreased about nine basis points. Immediately following the US Presidential election last fall, the Treasury yield curve steepened meaningfully, driven by heightened expectations for tax reform, fiscal stimulus, and above-trend economic growth under the Trump administration. However, market participants are now skeptical the Trump administration will deliver on their legislative agenda.
